

Can Your Budget Stand Pay Television

An Editorial

Television programs come to you without charge because manufacturers and retailers of items you need or want foot the bill. In transferring the costs of television from the advertiser to the viewer, pay television would create an entirely new item of considerable dimensions for the family budget.

Using prices quoted by the various proponents of pay television, let us assume that a family cut its television viewing time from five to three hours a day, 35 to 21 hours a week, and distributed it as follows:

Four hours — two baseball games at 75 cents per game	$1.50
Three hours — two films at 75 cents per film	$1.50
Three hours — two plays at 50 cents per play	$1.00
Three hours — one opera at 60 cents per opera	$ .60
Two hours — two stellar variety shows at 75 cents per show	$1.50
Six hours — miscellaneous at 50 cents per show	$3.00

The week's program costs would, then, total $9.10 or $473.20 a year. Consider what $473 a year would mean to the family purse.

A total of $473 for pay television would cost the average family more than it now spends on all doctors' and dentists' bills, plus all drugs and medicines, plus all cosmetics and shaving supplies, plus all dentifrices and all other items of personal and medical care.

It is seven times as much as the average family spends on shoes for the entire family.

It is more than the average family spends on all home furnishings and equipment, from refrigerators to laundry soap.

It is three times as much as the average family spends on heating and lighting its home.

It is more than the average family pays toward the purchase of its automobile, and three times as much as for all the gasoline and oil it uses in a year.

It is more than twice what the average family spends on all kind of recreation: games and toys for children, food for pets, cameras and film, radios, television sets and phonographs, sporting goods, equipment and participation fees.

Finally, $473 is almost fourteen times what the average family spends on all spectator fees: community dramatic shows, music and sports events, motion pictures, plays, concerts and professional and semi-professional ball games.

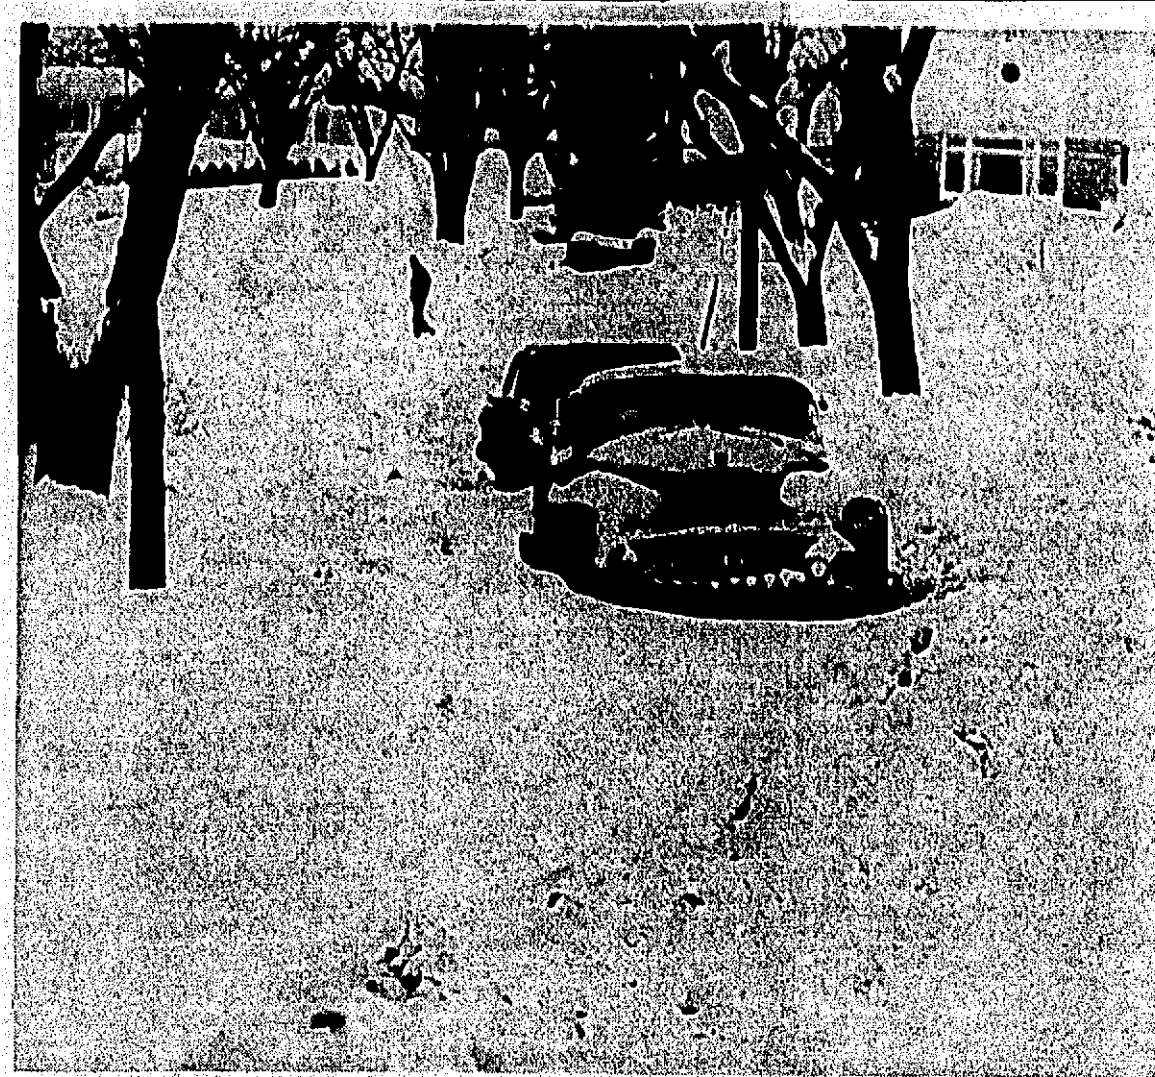

These figures are applicable only to the average family who would be required — under pay television — to pay for a choice of programs to see in its own home. To the nearly 9,000,000 families having less than $2000 expendable income, $473 would be nearly five times what they can now spend on all recreation. For over 7,000,000 families having between $2000 and $3000, it would be more than three times as much.

To all but the slightly over 7,000,000 American families with $7000 or more in expendable income, a choice of pay television would mean committing the total recreation budget of the family plus taking funds from other household needs.

Yet if those 7,000,000 families — barely one sixth of all television families — could assure pay television of $473 a year, the total revenue to promoters of pay television would pass three billion dollars.

Against this figure, the approximate quarter-billion dollars spent by advertisers for production of free network television shows could not possibly compete for shows or talent. And five-sixths of American families would have to do without what the other sixth would conceivably be able to pay for.

Consider the cost of pay television to you and make up your mind that you will never let this happen if you can help it.

SYRACUSE, N. Y. — REMAINS OF A BLIZZARD — A blizzard dumped more than 26 inches of snow on an old base of 10 inches over the weekend and caused schools and businesses to close. The weather bureau predicted continued snows as Syracuse residents began the task of digging out cars marooned in deep snow banks. The storm was described as the worst in 33 years by city officials. — AP Wirephoto

COLBY, Kan. — DEATH COMBAT — These two golden eagles, their talons locked together, apparently died in an air combat. Holding them to show their seven-foot wing spread are Norman Murray, right, and his son, Charles. Murray found the birds, still warm, beside a road near Colby where they apparently had fallen following the fight. Golden eagles are protected birds. — AP Wirephoto

All Around Town

By The Star Staff

Open House will be held at the newly remodeled Youth Center this weekend. The youngsters will celebrate Friday night and the general public is to visit the center from 3 to 5 p. m. Sunday. An actual dedication is set for 4 p. m.

In a meeting this week Hope Ministerial Alliance heartily endorsed the Hempstead Industrial Fund drive and urged wholehearted support of everyone.

When Officers here apprehended a North Carolina man in an auto stolen in Chicago yesterday four young hitchhiking runaways from Memphis were in the vehicle. They were pretty relieved when officers picked them up. The Sheriff's office reported they were turned over to their parents last night.

Pansy Ellis of Hope, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Ellis of Rt. 4, has enrolled for the spring semester at Mary Hardin Baylor College of Belton, Texas. She is a freshman and graduated from Hope High in 1935.

Marion McQueen of Hope is his journey in the Coliseum club at Henderson State Teachers College. She was recently guests at a style show in which Lita Brown of Hope appeared as a model. Also at Henderson 13 students have been selected to play in the 100-piece Third Intercollegiate Band. The group includes Dummer Welver of Hope.

2nd Lt. Jack W. White, son of Mrs. Elsie White of Hope, recently graduated from the 15-week officers' basic training course at Fort Benning, Ga. He entered the Army in 1937. He is 21 years old, a 1933 Hope High School graduate and a 1937 Northeast Louisiana State College graduate. He is a member of Phi Mu Alpha fraternity.

Retests for Bangs Disease Being Made

The mobile laboratory of the Animal Disease Eradication Branch, USDA, is located in Hempstead County this week. Technicians are retesting animals found to be suspect carriers of Bangs disease and needing testing to clean the herds.

Each farmer will be advised by letter the date of the technicians' visit to the farm. Most letters have been mailed. Any farmers who have a herd that contained one or more suspects that has not been scheduled should advise County Agent Oliver L. Adams at once. This is a service only to aid with the testing of suspect herds and is not for herds that have had recent animals removed.

Heifer calves four to eight months of age on farms scheduled by the technicians will be vaccinated and any animals that have never been tested may be tested. There is no charge for testing and vaccination by the technicians at this time.

Allies Demand Explanation From France

By WALTER LOGAN
United Press Staff Correspondent

France's NATO allies demanded an explanation for the bombing of a Tunisian village, which touched off wild and angry demonstrations against the French today in Tunis.

Angry mobs of Tunisians shouting their hatred of France marched to the residence of President Habib Bourguiba and demanded arms with which to drive 25,000 French troops out of Tunisia.

The Tunisian armed forces and gendarmes were alerted for serious trouble in the first major anti-French demonstration since the village of Sakiet Sidi Youssef was hit on Saturday.

Nationwide demonstrations were called in Tunisia for Friday when memorial services will be held for the 75 Sakiet dead.

The demonstrations coincided with a tightening blockade of French military posts in Tunisia. French military commanders left Tunisia today by helicopter to join their bi-lingual troops.

Norway served notice it would raise the Tunisian issue in today's meeting of the NATO Permanent Council in Paris on the ground that Tunisia plays an important role in the Western world.

Thor Myklebust, director of the Norwegian Foreign Office press section, said in Oslo that Norway took the view that what happens in Tunisia means much for the countries which do not belong to the Eastern or Western blocs.

Question of NATO Planes

One of the first questions expected to be asked was whether any NATO planes and equipment had been used in the attack on the village of Sakiet Sidi Youssef.

Moscow took the occasion to reinforce its frequent denials of the defensive purpose of NATO by asserting the American weapons used by the French were purely for aggressive purposes.

French Premier Felix Gaillard met with his cabinet this morning to seek ways of limiting the damage to France's world position.

WASHINGTON (UP)—President Eisenhower predicted today that the recession will start to end next month and employment will pick up.

In a special, written statement, the chief executive acknowledged that unemployment currently is bringing hardship to many Americans, but he said he is convinced that better days are in sight.

The President issued his "chill-up" statement in the wake of estimates by the Labor and Commerce departments that unemployment went to 4,494,000 in mid-January, the highest since 1930.

The one-month increase of 1,100,000 in the number of jobless caused official and public alarm.

Sees End of Down-Turn

The President also obviously was concerned about demands in Congress that the administration take drastic steps promptly to prevent a depression.

He said that from the best advice he could get he believed "that we have had most of our bad news on the unemployment front."

"I am convinced that we are not facing a prolonged, downswing in activity," he said. "Every indication is that March will commence to see the start of a pick up in job opportunities. That should mark the beginning of the end of the down-turn in our economy, provided we apply ourselves with confidence to the job ahead."

"As Americans we have a responsibility to work toward the early resumption of sound growth in our economy."

The President added, "I have confidence in the recovery of our economy later this year."

Takes Right Steps

President Eisenhower announced a two-billion-dollar program for modernization of post-office buildings and equipment during the next three to five years as one major "pump priming" effort to speed an economic upturn.

Today he said the administration is engaged in "systematic and comprehensive planning for expansion and modernization of public works and buildings, all of these useful public projects to be taken off the shelf when they could most appropriately be undertaken."

Morse to Give Schwartz's Data to Probers

By NEIL MacNEIL
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON (UP)—Senator Wayne Morse assured a House investigating subcommittee today that he will not help its ousted chief counsel, Bernard Schwartz, keep any secret records of his politically explosive probe.

Morse advised the new subcommittee chairman, Rep. Owen Harris (D-Ark.) that he can have the controversial documents today.

But Morse said after reading the documents that he will propose a separate Senate inquiry into the same field that the troubled House group has been exploring—the affairs of six federal regulatory agencies.

Schwartz, fired by the subcommittee Monday, took a large collection of what he called his own "working" documents to Morse and Sen. John J. Williams (R-Del.) after midnight that night—a short time before a federal marshal came to Schwartz' room with a subpoena to recover all the files.

Williams would say only that he does not have any documents.

Morse said today he had them, and he so informed Speaker Sam Rayburn's office Tuesday morning.

"I will turn them over to Rep. Harris or to any other person authorized to receive them," Morse said.

Harris said he will probably receive them.

THE STORY: Ed Owens, a former policeman who is working as a messenger for a brokerage house, has been murdered. David Winters, youngest detective on the New York police force, is working on the case.

CHAPTER III

Wales said, "We might as well sit down. You ever a fighter, young fellow?"

"Amateur. What makes you ask—see me in the ring?"

He shook his head and you wondered how his long, scrawny neck bore the strain. "I haven't seen a fight since Louis was knocking them over. You got the right hands for a pug, wide, deep-set jawbones."

"I did okay. Wanted to turn pro but my folks raised too much fuss. So I joined the force."

Wales smiled. He had neat even teeth—and all of them stork choppers. "Nothing in the world like being a young cop, the boss of your beat. Or maybe it's just there's nothing like being young. Get old and all you can do is read about things. I read and read. Why my eyes look shot. I don't need glasses, though—and who's going to tell Jane about this?"

"Jane?"

"Ed's wife. They got a daughter working some place in South America for an oil company. Had a boy who died when he was a kid. This will be rough on Jane."

"I got out my notebook, wrote down Wales' full name, home address, last precinct, squad he worked on, the Owens' home address. 'How long you been working here, Mr. Wales?'"

"About three years. Ed needed the dough but I'm all alone. I work to keep busy. My wife passed away back in '49, right after I retired from the force. When Ed started working here he got me on. Five hours a day, a way of passing time."

"You in the office when Mr. Owens was killed?"

"No. I left at 11:30 to take some bonds to a customer up on the Grand Concourse. He wasn't in so I came back here—about 20 minutes before the police arrived."

"Did he carry much cash?"

"B2? Lucky to have a buck floating around his pockets. Every extra dime went on the pokies. Not that Ed was a real gambler, but a few bucks here and there every week."

"Did Mr. Owens have any enemies? Perhaps some character he once collired?"

Wales shrugged, a tired motion. "No. At least none I ever heard of. We were just run-of-the-mill detectives, the usual arrests. We had one big collar, got a killer in a gang war. But that was a long time ago and he went up in smoke in the chair."

"We'll have to dig into his 'arrest record.'"

Wales smiled sadly. "Dig, dig, clear every little detail, that's a detective's life. A crime is like an iceberg, one-tenth showing and nine-tenths hidden."

At exactly 6 a.m. I awoke as though an alarm had gone off. I can always do that.

I was getting fresh shorts out of the desk drawer when Mary sat up, coming wide-awake fast as she always does, and said, "Are you getting up or going to bed? What times is it?"

"Sixteen after six. Have coffee with me?"

Mary yawned.

I dressed, while she was in the kitchenette. When I sat down for my Java Mary said, "Honest, Dave, you belong on Madison Avenue. You have a flair for wearing clothes. You look the part."

"I've been on Madison Avenue, had a fixed post there during a strike. Madison Avenue and 14th Street."

"Oh, stop talking about your awful job. I bet even the Commissioner forgets his work when he's home."

"Stop, riding me, you know I'm junior man," I said.

Mary kept sipping her cup. "Dave, will you get in touch with Uncle Frank? At least be polite enough to see what he wants."

"Okay. Tomorrow, when I'm off."

Her face came alive. "Really?"

"As you said, at least I can be polite." Frank wasn't a bad guy, long as he remained Uncle Frank and not bossman Frank.

Waiting for the elevator I checked my pockets: badge, wallet, keys, pens, notebook, extra shells, touched the gun in its shoulder holster, and ran a hand over my hair. I bought the morning papers, and dropped into the first coffee spot I hit to have a slow cup of the junk and see what they had to say about Ed Owens.

One paper surprised me by giving him a whole column. After saying he'd been shot in a hold-up while carrying non-negotiable bonds, they went on to say Owens and Wales had solved the murder of a Boots Brenner back in 1930. I never heard of the joker, but the paper claimed he was well on his way to becoming the Al Capone of New York City when he was found in a vacant Brooklyn lot full of lead. "Within 24 hours, through brilliant detective work," Owens and Wales arrested a small-time, bootlegger named Sal Kahn who was running a still near the lot where Brenner's body was found. Kahn had a record of several arrests for drinking and selling booze. He admitted killing Boots when the angrier tried to muscle in on an electric still. Kahn was running the still was an "amazing work of scientific ingenuity." Kahn pleaded self-defense and died in the chair without revealing the name of his partner, who had built the still.

caused by adverse foreign reaction. Gaillard was strengthened on the domestic front when he won an unsolicited vote of confidence in the National Assembly early today by an overwhelming vote of 335 to 179.

The vote ignored foreign criticism of the bombing and concentrated instead on the French position the bombing was "legitimate defense" because Tunisia had given refuge to Algerian rebels.

Face Squeeze Play

Gaillard also faced a difficult position in Tunisia itself where a massive squeeze play was being tightened against French military installations in an effort to drive out the 25,000 French troops.

And while Tunisia tightened the squeeze, it made new charges against France. An official communiqué Tuesday night said French troops invaded the village of Fariana, 15 miles east of the Algerian border, Sunday and killed two townspeople.

Tunisia meanwhile expressed hope that United Nations debate on the bombing would help "the internationalization" of the Algerian rebellion. France once walked out of the United Nations to prevent worldwide debate on what it considers an internal problem.

WASHINGTON (UP)—This is the day Robert Backover may trade his freedom for a few precious moments with his dying daughter.

The 29-year-old father promised to come out of hiding today and face arrest on grand larceny charges, to fulfill the wish of his little Paula Ann, 6, who is suffering from leukemia.

If he does, police have promised not to interfere.

There is also an offer of help from a Miami restaurant owner who wants to give $1,000 so Backover can stay in the girl's hospital bedside in the last days of her illness.

Police Chief Silas Dennis Jr. of suburban Hyattsville, Md., told the United Press there would be no officers awaiting Backover if he appears.

"We expect him to give himself up after seeing his daughter and we've made no arrest plans," the chief said.

Backover wired his wife from Los Angeles Saturday instructing her to tell Paula Ann he was coming home today. The wire was in response to a plea issued through the press on behalf of and frost bite returned to duty. Five firemen and a policeman were still hospitalized today.

The fire, of undetermined cause, started with an explosion in the basement of the two-story building.

Unofficial damage estimates ran as high as a half-million dollars. "It's going to be quite a loss," said Deputy Chief Clary Ehlers, who was one of those treated for smoke inhalation.

Dozens of firemen were still at the icy scene this morning trying to quell stubborn flames inside the charred ruins of a two-story brick building which housed a jeweler, restaurant, optometrist, a clinic, a tavern and a barber.

Also destroyed was an adjacent camera shop. Residents of three houses in the fire area were told to vacate, but more than 150 firemen and 20 pieces of equipment kept the flames from spreading.

The firemen fought the flames more than three hours in zero temperature before bringing them under control. Many of those treated for smoke inhalation

Chou Quits as Foreign Minister

TOKYO (UP)—Peiping Radio announced today that Chou En-lai has resigned his post as foreign minister of Communist China.

The broadcast said he retained the post of premier and recommended Vice Premier Chen Yi for the foreign minister's job.

The announcement was part of a major ministerial reshuffle in Red China, in which nine ministries were involved with some abolished and some merely having the ministers changed.

Chou, who is Red China's No. 2 man behind Mao Tse-tung, was proclaimed premier and foreign minister on Oct. 1, 1949, and had held both jobs until now.

Chen Yi was commander in chief of the new fourth army in the Yangtze River and Shantung Province from 1940 until the end of World War II, when he became commander-in-chief of the people's liberation army on the eastern China front.

He is 60, an intellectual from a scholarly family of Szechuan province, where he was once a news paper editor.

Equalization Board Can't Assess Too

LITTLE ROCK (UP)—A member of a county board of equalization cannot serve as a deputy assessor. Attorney General Bruce Bechtel held today.

"Since both offices involved are essentially executive offices, it is my opinion that an equalization board members may not serve as deputy assessor. In addition, it is my opinion that in any case these offices are incompatible," the opinion said.

It cited an article of the State Constitution which prohibits a person from holding more than one office in the same department at the same time with some exceptions.

Garrett Willis, Hempstead county assessor, had asked for the ruling.

The grandparents said Paula Ann thought she would get well in her daddy was with her.

The men are Gale K. Springer, 18, an AWOL Marine from Sheridan, Ark., and Stephen C. Van Swearingen, 29, recently released from the California State Penitentiary.

They were arrested near Pecos Saturday night by the highway patrol.

Sheriff A. B. Nail said the pair was charged with kidnaping Flagstaff, Ariz., minister Melvin J. Peterson at knife-point when he offered them a ride.

They dumped him, bound and gagged, on an Indian reservation near Gallup, N.M., keeping his car and the total of 75 cents he had with him, Nail said. Both were held on $5,000 each.

DOROTHY DIX

His Wife Gets Around — But Not In Kitchen

Dear Dorothy Dix: I've spent eight years hoping my wife would change, but have finally given up. She has never cooked a good hot meal for me, takes my pay check and spends it foolishly, goes out shopping and visiting all day. She does take good care of our three children, and is true to me.

HUNGRY. Dear Dorothy: Keep the pay check for most of it for some good meals outside. Tell your wife that's what you're doing until she makes with the pots and pans to produce something appetizing and filling.

Dear Dorothy Dix: I'm a wife and businesswoman of 32. Some years ago my mother had a stroke and since my father was a sickly man, I had to support both of them. I have always held a good job, and have never questioned the fact that it is my duty to take care of them as they gave me a most happy childhood and girlhood. I was married two years ago, with my parents' blessing. My husband cannot become reconciled to the fact that a good bit of the money I earn must go to my folks. I explained this all to him before our marriage, and he agreed it was the right thing to do, but now he's changed his tune. I make almost as much money as he does; as a matter of fact, I think it costs him less to live now than it did when he was a bachelor. Naturally I'm not going to stop helping my parents, but this continual arguing over money is undermining our marriage.

Dear Goldie: It's certainly disconcerting for a woman to marry a man she loves only to find out that he is a greedy wretch who begrudges the few dollars she gives her family. He should rejoice, instead, to know that he has a woman who is so loyal, grateful and devoted. Someday these qualities may be to his advantage. Though you love your husband now, your feeling for him will turn to active dislike unless he looks at things differently. Tell him, firmly, that nothing he can say will change your feelings for your parents, that to hold your love he must stop counting your pennies, and that charity is the greatest virtue. Some day he may be seeking it himself.

Dear Dorothy Dix: Where can I obtain a list of jobs suitable for home employment? I've inquired at the library but they don't have this information.

Dear C. S.: Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for my leaflet "Turn Your Spare Time Into Cash" which lists many jobs a woman can do at home.

Dear Dorothy Dix: I'm 18 and in love with a man of 20. I'm sure he loves me, but he's from the wrong side of the tracks and won't admit he likes me. He doesn't think he'd make an appropriate husband for me. My parents have met him, and think he's a swell guy. How can I convince him of this?

KIM

Dear Kim: He must have an inferiority complex of the first order. Looks like you'll have to do most of the talking in this courtship. I hope the boy is really worth the effort.

Ex-Reds Tell of New Move Into Labor

GARY, Ind. (UP)—Two former Communists told the House Un-American Activities Committee that the new party line is "to get back into the mainstream of labor" and to take over the steel industry.

The ex-Communists made the charge Monday at the opening of a two-day hearing here by the committee headed by Rep. Francis E. Walter (D-Pa.).

Joseph La Fleur, 46, who served as an undercover man for the FBI for 15 years, also named five steel workers as illegal active Communists during a period ending in 1932. Two former members of the Gary League of Women Voters also were called Communists by La Fleur.

Behind Headquarters' Move. La Fleur's charges followed a description of Red strategy to colonize the "steel industry as 'part of Russia's total offense' in its drive for world domination. The outline, described by Walter, was corroborated by John Lautner, 56, Youngstown, Ohio, who said he was kicked out of the Communist Party in 1930 "after torture."

Control of the steel industry was behind the Communists' recent transfer of their headquarters from New York to Chicago, Lautner said.

Lautner said his function while a party member was to channel college-trained Communists into the steel industry as "intelligence agents."

"They are trying to do it by building fires in unions and by creating dissension," he said. "The American worker 'has a great deal of common sense and won't swallow sugar-coated pills and communism.'"

Five Refuse to Answer. Between 1930 and 1941, Lautner said, the Communists had under control about one-third of the leaders in 30 national unions. A clean-up by the CIO, however, resulted in their expulsion, he said.

The five persons accused as Communists by La Fleur refused to answer committee questions on grounds the first and fourth amendments afforded them protection. Not present were the two women La Fleur accused as Communists.

One of those who pleaded the First Amendment when asked about his educational and vocational background, Edward Yellin, 30, Fort Collins, Colo., also refused to say whether he had ever

Agriculture Farm Rental Plan Folds

WASHINGTON (UP)—The Agriculture Department's plan to take crop land out of production by renting entire farms collapsed because farmers wanted too much money.

The department announced Friday it had rejected all rental bids received from farmers in Illinois, Nebraska, and Tennessee under the experimental program. Farmers in Maine, the other test state in the program, have until Feb. 28 to submit bids. Department officials said no decision has been made on offers from that state.

The 45,000 to 50,000 bids from the other three states ranged from $0 to $100 an acre, soil bank officials said.

The department's fixed rates for participation in the soil bank's regular conservation reserve program are $12 for Illinois, $9 for Nebraska, and $10 for Tennessee. The department said it decided not to accept any rental bids from the three-state area because most were too high in relation to productivity and rental values of the farms involved. A department spokesman said the percentage of bids which were within the limits the government would pay were not considered to be representative.

The farmers whose bids were not accepted are eligible to participate in the regular conservation reserve, soil bank officials said. The sign-up period for the conservation reserve expires April 15. Farmers from Illinois, Tennessee, and Nebraska who want to participate may file applications held party membership.

Committee Counsel Frank T. Warner produced papers which, he said, showed Yellin had concealed his education at the City College of New York and the University of Michigan when he sought employment with the Carnegie Illinois Steel Corp.

on the same general basis as farmers in the other states. The bid program to take entire farms out of production under the conservation reserve was announced late last year by Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson. He said the experimental plan would be expanded to other states if it proved successful in the test states.

Some officials had indicated the bid program would become a major tool in reducing farm surpluses and in repining the expensive acreage reserve program under which farmers sign one-year contracts to take individual crops out of production. The test bid program would have provided for the withdrawal of entire farms from production for five to 10 years.

Ike, Soviet Envoy Swap Formal Pledges

WASHINGTON (UP)—President Eisenhower and new Soviet Ambassador Mikhail A. Menshikov today exchanged formal pledges that the United States and Russia will work for peace through "no negotiations."

Menshikov told reporters after calling at the White House that he and the President also agreed on the hope that a new summit meeting can be "organized." The President and Menshikov conferred for about 30 minutes when the Soviet ambassador called to submit his credentials. Their pledge to work for peace through negotiations was made in a formal exchange of remarks made public by both the White House and the State Department.

The pledge was regarded as an other step toward a possible East-West summit conference. Menshikov emerged from the White House in a smiling, jovial mood to report that he and the chief executive "expressed the same view that relations between our countries should be improved and they will be improved."

Menshikov said the summit conference, which has been strongly urged by Russian leaders but thus far not accepted formally by this government, came up in the meeting today "in a general way." He said both he and the President expressed the hope that the meeting will be organized.

St. Petersburg, Fla. (UP) — Casey Stengel insisted today he "ain't mad at anybody, but . . ."

Then he went on to tell three of his Yankee stars — Mickey Mantle, Whitey Ford and Bob Turley — they were rather foolish to risk injuries by playing in a benefit baseball game this early in the spring.

Stengel, supervising the Yankees' rookie school here, made his comments after General Manager George Weiss in New York had criticized Mantle, Ford and Turley for appearing in a charity game at Key West, Fla., last Sunday.

The game was staged by the Major League Baseball Players' Assn. and all proceeds were earmarked for old-time ball players and their widows.

No Cause Worth Risks
"No doubt it was a worthy cause," Stengel said. "But none of our players should have risked their arms and leg no matter how worthy the cause."

"Anyway, I was home in California at the time and I don't know how hard our fellows played. Besides, I have no jurisdiction over what my men do until they report to me. I'll say one thing, though — if anyone reports have not in shape, there will be hell to pay."

At that, Stengel let Mantle, Ford and Turley off much more lightly than did Weiss.

"If you asked those guys (Ford and Turley) to pitch three innings the first day of spring training," Weiss said, "there would be plenty of beefs. Yet they get into this game cold and think nothing of it."

Ex-Cleveland pitcher Bob Feller started on the mound for the American League All-Stars, who beat the National League All-Stars, 4-3, and Ford and Turley each followed him with two inning stints.

"Mantle shouldn't have played, either, especially with all the physical difficulties he had last year," Weiss added. Mantle collected two hits.

Blame on Punching Bag
"Look at Ford! We sent him to Mayo Brothers for a complete physical checkup this winter. And he's been working out on a punching bag for some time. If he's hurt, he'll probably blame it on the punching bag."

Weiss admitted permission had been granted for the players to appear in Sunday's game during the major league meetings at Colorado Springs, Colo., last December.

"Certainly, we gave our permission," he said. "But I certainly didn't expect something like this to happen. I was under the impression some of the old-timers would do the playing and that our fellows would make only a token appearance."

Stan Musial of the St. Louis Cardinals slammed out three hits for the losing National League and played the entire game.
